COURSE: INTELLIGENCE PRINCIPLES AND METHODS

SUBJECT: Special Requirements for Interview

HOURS: 2

METHOD OF PRESENTATION: Lecture and Discussion

INSTRUCTOR: 25X1A

OBJECTIVES:

1. To impart an understanding of the process by which analysts initiate and write special requirements for an interview and the channels through which they pass.
2. To furnish background information on the substantive problem the students deal with in this and subsequent presentations.

SUMMARY OF PRESENTATION:

25X1A

The instructor gives a background briefing on the situation prevailing in [REDACTED] with emphasis on the subjects on which requirements will be discussed. These subjects are presented so as to suggest gaps in intelligence on which requirements might be issued. On one of these, a series of hypothetical individual reports is summarized.

The instructor invites the students to suggest obvious gaps, and to offer organization and wording for a requirement on the subject handled in detail, responding to a specific notice of intelligence potential. They then do the same on the others, in a more general way.

The students then move figuratively to the headquarters of OO/Contact Division, where they discuss the suitability of transmitting to the appropriate field office these requirements from the analyst, others submitted by IAC components, and standing requirements.
